Hello,

I am writing as a small business owner, but also of mother of two Oregon University students.

For the health and safety of both the public and myself, I chose to close my business as an esthetician/cosmetic tattoo artist. In my day to day life I don't like to speak about single motherhood or even the struggles of being a small business owner. But now is the time.

There is zero income coming into my household at this time (children work at the schools, which are closed). Today upon much stress, I took inventory of what we will begin to cut to stay afloat as a family & with my business.

My daughter, a senior at University of Oregon, gave 30 days notice to a lease that her management company will not break. We are hoping someone will rent the apartment and we will not be held responsible, although I am not confident many people are looking for new apartments at this time. We are attempting to do anything we can to stay afloat. Please help those of us who are fearful not only of losing our businesses, but of where our next meal will come from.

Kind regards,
Shannon
