BACKGROUND: House Bill 3141 (2007) permitted the Oregon Department of Education (ODE) to spend up to $350,000 on TAG programs. However, due to other existing statutes, ODE was limited in the total amount that could be spent on TAG program staff and was not authorized to contract for regional TAG centers, two ideas that were part of Senate Bill 622 (2007), which did not become law.

Senate Bill 517 (2007) directed ODE to work with voluntary organizations approved to administer interscholastic activities to develop a steroid and performance-enhancing supplement education program. ODE does not generally develop curriculum, as that is a task performed by school districts.

Senate Bill 426 (2007) created the Oregon Educators Benefit Board (OEBB). As adopted, collective bargaining groups are not mandated to participate in OEBB until October 1, 2009, rather than 2008. Additionally, non-represented employees are required to participate in OEBB on October 1, 2008, even if no other groups in the district are otherwise participating in OEBB. The OEBB has indicated that this poses administrative difficulties for school districts.
