EFFECT OF COMMITTEE AMENDMENTS:

BACKGROUND: Property tax appeals currently cover some or all components of a property tax account. Consider the case in which a party appeals only one component of the property taxes, and the value is reduced by the body or tribunal on that component. This measure opens the possibility that other parties may cause reappraisal of other components of the account with the potential that any increases in the value of these other components will outweigh some or all of the reduction, and the value of the total account will increase.
