Thank you Beth

When I met Steve Apotheker for the first time I knew very little of his background. I was volunteering to be on a sub-committee for an advisory committee I was serving on and did so as much to participate as to learn. Little did I know that Steve was the very best to learn from. What I will always remember about Steve wasn't his depth of knowledge and understanding, the likes of which few of us will ever have. It was his demeanor. He was patient and calm while explaining to those of us slow to grasp subject matter. But with a sparkle in his eyes, you could sense his deep passion for the topic just underneath the surface. Throughout our short time as a team we all learned an immense amount, not just the material but the proper way to put it into context. I have no doubt Steve left that kind of legacy with everything he did. He is sorely missed by many, far more than he probably could have imagined. Steve left the world and those of us who met him a better place. Thank you Steve, for touching our lives.
