

Dear Ms. Maria Kelly,

I am writing to strongly oppose House Bill 3452 and to urge you to vote against this misguided legislation.

H.B. 3452 carves out an exception to the state Endangered Species Act to allow for endangered gray wolves to be killed. Amending the critical wildlife protection law to allow intentional killings of endangered species creates a dangerous precedent -- what will prevent more exceptions from being added in the future? Oregon's Endangered Species Act exists to protect and recover endangered species, not to create opportunities to kill them.

The bill will also override Oregon's state wolf plan, which was adopted in 2005 after an extensive process of public and stakeholder input. H.B. 3452 would reverse the wolf plan's important safeguards specifying the few circumstances when wolves can be killed. It would remove the requirement that a permit first be obtained to kill endangered wolves caught attacking livestock or working dogs, allow wolves to be killed without a permit if the wolf is caught "harassing" or "believed to have attacked or harassed" livestock or working dogs and would issue permits to kill wolves for causing "damage."

These are extremely broad, highly subjective standards that open the door to poaching and unjustified wolf killing. The state wolf plan as written provides ample flexibility for wolf-livestock conflict prevention methods, and no bill that lessens protections for wolves should be allowed to supersede the wolf plan.

Absurdly, H.B. 3452 declares that a state of emergency exists, but the status quo demonstrates there is no emergency. Since 2011 a court order has prohibited the killing of endangered wolves. Agencies and ranchers have relied solely on preventative methods to solve wolf-livestock conflicts. In that time the wolf population has nearly doubled, and wolf-livestock conflicts have dramatically declined.

We are at a turning point in our state. Oregon can become known as a leader in the use of preventative methods to resolve wolf-livestock conflicts, or it can go down in history as the state that chose to kill a species it has been mandated by the public to protect. Please do everything in your power to prevent H.B. 3452 from becoming law.

Thank you for taking my concerns into consideration. I look forward to hearing from you.
