BACKGROUND: Oregon allows a successor or personal representative of a deceased person to file an affidavit in probate court for administration of the estate, if the estate has no more than $200,000 value in real property and $75,000 in personal property. Through the use of the small estate affidavit, the successor can access a decedent’s assets and pay debts. Oregon law is silent on the successor’s ability to open bank accounts with the decedent’s money, and as a result, some financial institutions may be wary of opening such accounts without clear guidance.

Senate Bill 402 allows an affiant in a small estate proceeding to open deposit accounts with the decedent’s funds, for the purpose of paying claims and expenses of the estate. It further specifies that financial institutions are not liable to any person for the affiant’s use of those funds, nor is the institution required to ensure the funds are used properly.
