Hi Beth:

I support Solar in Oregon because it provides jobs and is also potentially a help with our environment. Having been in Europe last week and able to watch some innovative approaches by other countries, it is amazing and desirable to me to get as many people as possible charging and driving cars charged by solar. There are some, but for those of us who are raising families and have plans for kids to go to college, it is difficult to pencil these kinds of things that can have long term benefits without government help. Solar is also an area where we can invest and there are limited negative externalities, especially compared to combustible gas fuels. And as someone who has been researching energy efficiency for more than twenty years, I know that without incentives people will not make the changes need to make Portland choose clean solar options.

Thank you,
Bob
