

SB 341 Limited Liability Agritourism bill – Informational hearing - Senate Judiciary Committee

Chairman Prozanski, Members of the Committee...thank you for letting me testify

My name is Scottie Jones. My farm is Leaping Lamb Farm in Alsea, west of Corvallis

Punch line: asking committee to host a public hearing and work session on this bill so more information can be brought out for discussion

Intro – who I am, why I am speaking

- sheep farmer since 2003 with husband
- agritourism operator since 2006, sustainability
- founder and Exec. Dir. U.S. Farm Stay Association (501c6 trade association) – hear stories from around country
- part of Travel Oregon work group on agritourism, helped organize Oregon's first Agitourism Summit at OSU

What I offer as an agritourism farm stay

- chance to connect with the farmer, his/her land, hear her story
- chance to ask questions about what we do, how we do it, why we do it, hands-on experience
- chance to be in nature and experience unplugged lifestyle
- chance to eat farm fresh eggs and produce right from the soil
- education about small scale production, diversified farming techniques

What others offer

- pumpkin patches at E-Z Orchards, flower festivals at Wooden Shoe Tulip festival, you-pick at Fairfield Farm, Plate and Pitchfork dinners, school groups to Molalla elk farm, you-cut Christmas trees, crush parties at vineyards, cattle drives on ranches
- many entrepreneurial ideas to diversify operations so not held hostage to weather or commodity conditions

Why it's important

- rural economic development – trickle down to communities in which agritourism operation based
- small farm sustainability – economies of scale dictate that small farms hard to make a living, but with diversification into related activity makes it possible to hang on to farm
- state(and country) needs small farms to continue heritage lines for livestock and seeds, refinement of low-tech operations, relationship with consumer that not possible from large-scale operations
- teaches urbanites where food comes from and connects them to it - something legislature has been interested in with farm to school and healthy food initiatives
- demonstrates stewardship of land entrusted to us and environmental interests – solar panels and composter

What other states have done – at least 22

- CO 2014 -FL
- NM 2013 -KY
- ID 2014 -IN
- NC 2006 -TN
- KS2004 -AL
- VA 2008 -OK

- LA 2008
- UT
- MS
- SD
- ME
- GA
- ND

What this bill will do to address concerns

- similar to Equine Limited Liability law, postings will inform guests about dangers on farm land
- not talking about limiting liability on everything – ex. Keeps being brought up about farmer running over child with tractor. Not about gross negligence. We do our due diligence to protect guests; guests are aware to take care
- allows farms looking to open agritourism operation fair chance at finding liability insurance
- maybe eventually insurance rates will drop
- reduces anxiety on part of farm operators to host guests on their property – we are educators at heart and love to explain what we do. How else will there ever be continuing generations of farmers if we don't give kids the experience of what we do?

Final thoughts: Had a reasonable compromise in fall. Asking committee if willing to work on compromise again. Not talking about limiting liability on everything, but need to balance the opportunity our agritourism enterprises offer to urbanites with the liabilities we take on when we offer to share our lifestyle and our farms.

Thank you. I am happy to answer any questions you might have.

Scottie Jones
 Leaping Lamb Farm
 Alsea OR 97324
 541-487-4966
sjones@leapinglambfarm.com / scottie@farmstayus.com

STATE OF OREGON
 DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE
 DIVISION OF TAX SERVICES
 1000 NE Oregon Street
 Salem, Oregon 97331
 (503) 398-4000
 www.oregon.gov/rev