

The criteria for a criminal charge in this bill, is much too vague and could cause conviction in scenarios where a defendant is not culpable. You must be careful when you throw out the factor of intent. Firearms, like your good China, are accessible at times, contingent upon the frequency of usage by responsible individuals. Many hunters prepare their hunting rifles on a bed or couch before opening day. Is Oregon calling this act criminal? I'm not a hunter nor NRA member, just wanted to comment. James D Kiely, Eugene, Or.
