

Dear Beth,

Picture a day when all foods are genetically modified because Monsanto and other GMO interests have wiped out organic farmers. This can happen far faster than you think with the power and cash they have. I am not a slacker, an Occupy person, or crazy. I am in senior management at a technology company. If your son or daughter has a child 15 years from now, do you think they want to feed their baby genetically modified food, or pure organic food? We do not know the full consequences of food that has been genetically modified - do you want to find out the hard way? If you have a loved one fighting cancer and the doctor said they can only fight the disease if they eat the purest of food and you can't find any non-modified fruits and vegetables, how will you feel?

Please consider your conscience. Don't think by doing nothing against GMOs that you have protected your constituents.

thank you,
