BACKGROUND:

Since 1991, Oregon has required that new woodstoves be certified to meet air pollution standards. Woodstoves are a major source of benzene and carbon dioxide in the air which can affect human health and the environment. The Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) also identifies wintertime residential wood burning as a significant source of fine particulate air pollution, which at times exceeds federal air quality health standards. House Bill 3068A would direct DEQ to form a work group to study and develop recommendations for reducing woodstove smoke.
