BACKGROUND:

Radiation Protection Services (RPS) is a program of the Oregon Health Authority (OHA), which promotes health and safety to protect people from unnecessary exposure to radiation such as X-ray equipment, radioactive materials, and tanning beds that are reportedly linked to skin cancers. Specific licenses are required for persons who use radioactive material in hospitals, universities, and industry for individual materials, or for types of facilities. There is a $3,000 maximum annual license fee for a specific license.

The current biennial registration fees are $228 for a hospital, radiological, chiropractic, osteopathic, or medical X-ray machine; $116 for a hospital X-ray machine when the X-ray machine is inspected by an accredited inspector, $152 for an industrial or podiatry X-ray machine, $112 for a dental, academic or veterinary X-ray machine, and $112 for a microwave oven repair facility.
