

Oregon

August 20, 2018

Oregon State Joint Interim Committee on Student Success
Salem, Oregon

Dear Leaders of the Joint Interim Committee on Student Success:

As business leader members of ReadyNation Oregon, we write to thank you for your work during this past legislative session and to urge you to maximize the impact of your interim committee's work on student success. There are three early childhood programs that can help build a strong foundation for Oregon's children and yield great returns in K-12 schooling and later in life. These investments will ultimately lead to a stronger workforce and economy for our state.

There is scientific consensus that brain development from birth to age five sets the foundation for children's future success. During these years, more than one million new neural connections form every second. Thus, it is essential that child care consist of responsive, quality environments that nurture early brain development. High-quality child care is not only important to Oregon's children and families, but to the state's economy as well. In Oregon, the child care sector employs almost 19,000 people and generates $403.6 million in revenue. With continued support from the legislature, this sector could grow further to reach those who still do not have access to the child care their families need.

One investment that pays incredible dividends for years to come, is voluntary home visiting. Parents are a child's first teachers, and some parents are more well-equipped than others for this responsibility. With advice and coaching from trained professionals, new parents can have better interactions with their children from pregnancy to age five. One program that operates in Oregon, Healthy Families Oregon, is a multi-site statewide program that strengthens a nurturing parent-child relationship. This relationship promotes growth and development allowing the baby to be healthy, safe and learn. Home visiting programs also cut public spending on healthcare by reducing low birthweight, infant mortality, and emergency room visits.

Many at-risk students who do not have access to early childhood education show deficits from the first day of kindergarten and are never able to catch up to their peers. In 2015, only 34% of Oregon's fourth graders were at or above the proficient level in reading. High-quality preschool programs, like Oregon's Pre-Kindergarten (OPK) and Pre-K Promise, can help to bridge the vocabulary gap seen between young children of professional parents and those receiving welfare. Children who attended Chicago's CPC preschool program were more likely to graduate from high school, and attend college.

In order to succeed fully in academics and careers, Oregon's students need to have a strong foundation built in their early years. For these reasons, we urge you to include early childhood programs in your recommendations to support student success in Oregon.

1212 New York Avenue NW / Suite 300 / Washington, DC 20005 / +1.202.464.7005

Sincerely,

Martha Brooks
State Director
ReadyNation Oregon

ReadyNation Members

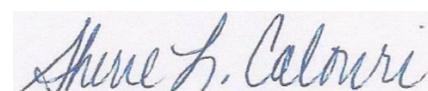

C: Members of the Oregon Legislature
Governor Kate Brown, Oregon
Miriam Calderon, Oregon Early Learning Director
Patrick Allen, Oregon Health Authority Director
Director Colt Gill, Oregon Department of Education
Director Fariborz Pakseresht, Oregon Department of Human Services

Susan Bender-Phelps
Owner,
Odyssey Mentoring, LLC

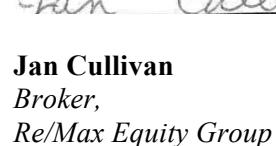

Dawn Bonder
CEO,
Health Republic Insurance

Sherre Calouri
Consultant,
Independent Consultant

Joseph Christy
Consultant & Retired Juvenile
Director Wash Co.,
Private Consultant

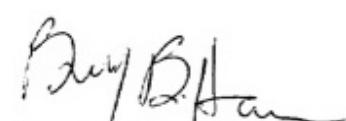

Kathy Christy
Broker,
Keller Williams Realty

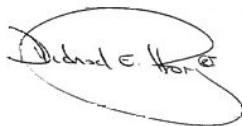

Jan Cullinan
Broker,
Re/Max Equity Group

Timothy Evinger
Lead Consultant,
Tim Evinger & Associates

Bev Haines,
Marketing,
Live Well, Live Green

Michael Harper
Agent/Owner,
State Farm Insurance

Marcia Hille
Executive Director,
Sequoia Mental Health

Joey Jenkins
Founder & CEO,
Jenkins Coaching LLC

Candence Jones
Member, Board of Directors, Oswego Heritage Council

Roger Jones
*President,
Aetna Brokerage, Inc.*

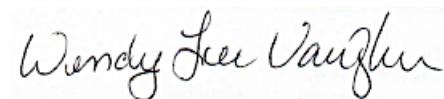

Jon Palanuk
*President & Founder,
International Youth Silent Film Festi*

Laurel Regan
*Retired
NW Natural*

Susan Stoltenberg
*Executive Director,
YWCA of Greater Portland*

Steve Swenson
*Investigator/Owner
CACI*

Kenneth Thrasher
Chairman & Former CEO, Compli

Wendy Vaughn
*Manager,
Hogue & Hogue Insurance Solutions*

Mickey Lansing Luehrs
Consultant

Katie Riley
*Professor,
OHSU*

Martha Brooks
*State Director
ReadyNation Oregon*