

Serrano and Diamond, OR Rancher, Tim O’Crowley. Tim grew up as a rancher in Oregon and has always had a string of horses. In 2015 he got his first wild Kiger. He gentled and trained Serrano and according to Tim this is the hardest horse he has on the place. He can cross any terrain without shoes and can work all day, both attributes that he admires in a horse.

This is grullo colored stallion. Kigers come in both this color and also the yellow/red tones but all Kigers have a dun factor with a stripe down their backs. Leg stripes, shoulder stripes and forehead webbing can also occur.

This another of the primary Kiger colors sometimes known as a golden dun.

It was 1977 when the original Kigers were brought into the corrals at Burns. Mesteño, pictured here, was the poster boy for the new breed.

Kiger running (dorsal stripe)

Kiger with bi colored mane and leg striping