BACKGROUND:

761 suicides occurred in Oregon in 2015, and per the Oregon Health Authority, suicide is the second leading cause of death for people under the age of 35 in Oregon. In 2013, Oregon was in the top 10 US states for suicide incidence, a position it has been in for several decades. Peer support programs use peer-to-peer support as a primary intervention for recent suicide survivors or family members. The "peers" are people that are themselves in recovery from a suicide experience, and have usually received some level of training (although they are not generally professional counselors).

Senate Bill 833 requires law enforcement agencies to adopt policies and procedures for officers to follow when responding to an attempted suicide or a completed suicide. It requires such procedures to include the officer offering to facilitate, and with authorization facilitating, the referral of a person who attempted suicide or family members of a person who committed suicide to a peer support program. The measure also requires hospitals that discharge patients following a suicide attempt to facilitate that patient's referral to a peer support program.
