

Please restore the right of Oregon farmers and communities to establish GMO-free zones. Oregon has a great agricultural heritage and diversity of products that needs to be protected against unwanted invasion by GMO crops. GMO-crop developers and growers have shown themselves in the past to be irresponsible regarding pollen drift to neighboring non-GMO crops, and have even denied growing GMO crops where they are proven to be grown. GMO developers and growers have an opportunity to become responsible stewards of their crops and resolve these issues--but until they do, other farmers and communities should be able to protect themselves by creating reasonable boundaries against them.

Mona Exinger
Seaside, OR