

It seems only common sense to allow farmers to run their businesses in the best possible ways. All farmers I have met are cognizant of the needs of the land, know what to plant and when. It is beyond belief that we seem to have reached the low of micro-managing farmers. Don't we depend upon them for our sustenance? Let's let them manage their business—and we will also benefit from having healthful food.

Thank you.
Janet levins
Talent OR