BACKGROUND:

Oregon law currently provides for the state's participation in an interstate compact for emergency management assistance as well as local governments' use of intrastate mutual assistance agreements to enable flexible and responsive sharing of resources in the event of disaster.

Senate Bill 62 expands the use of intrastate mutual assistance compacts to include state and tribal governments along with local governments, and renames such agreements "Oregon Resource Coordination Assistance Agreements." The measure requires state government to participant while allowing local and tribal governments discretion to opt-out and opt-in, respectively.
