My sister worked at a big box pet store where scheduling was done last minute, every week. She was bounced between early morning shifts and night shifts and her health collapsed under the strain. When she came down with sepsis after being bitten by a sick animal in the store, ~~she~~ and almost lost her life, after hospitalization and a too-brief period at home, she was put back on the same abusive schedule by the store. It took a doctors note to keep her on one shift (evenings only) but by then her health was broken.
