Indiana Doctor tells Mom: "Be Compliant! Vaccinate or I'll Call CPS!"

So I had a horrible experience today with a doctor. We took Adam in for his 2 year well visit so that if he ever needed a doctor for a sick visit we could take him in. We selectively vaccinate and haven't done any since he was 2 months old.

The student doctor is the one who did the actual check up. He took a history and kept commenting on how advanced Adam is. He was surprised that we were still breastfeeding but didn't seem turned off by it; more curious than anything. Was happy to hear Adam was still RF. Then he asked about vaccines and asked if Adam was up to date. That's when I explained that no he wasn't and we weren't doing anymore until we further researched it. He finished up and said Adam was very healthy and everything was good and he just had to have his boss sign off on the chart and we would be out of there.

We wait 30 minutes and the student doctor and the pediatrician finally walk in the exam room and the pediatrician doesn't even look at me or speak to me. Instead they go to his chart and are talking back and forth and the student doctor is nodding and writing things down. That's when the pediatrician turns to me and asks "Has he had any vaccinations at all?" I respond, "He's had a few at birth but none since." He turns back to the student and tells him something and he writes it down. Then the student doctor tries to take my son from my arms, and as he is reaching for him the pediatrician tells me "Your son will be receiving 14 vaccinations today, Mrs. Ramsey."

I instinctively pull my son back to me and tell him, "No. We do not want any vaccines." The pediatrician goes on to tell me that everything I've read online about autism isn't true. I respond, telling him that's not why we aren't vaccinating. He says to me, "You are going to kill your son. You don't want to be responsible for killing this little boy, do you Mrs. Ramsey?" Before I could respond he nods to the student doctor, who steps forward to try to take Adam out of my arms AGAIN. I pull back and am backed literally into a corner at this point and I'm shaking. The pediatrician goes on about how I am not thinking of the best interest of my child and how I'm going to kill him and that he WILL be getting the vaccines today and more every month until he is up-to-date in full. His voice is beginning to raise by now and the look on his face stern. "This is for the best, Mrs Ramsey so be compliant." As he says this to me, for a 3rd time the student doctor tries to take Adam from my arms; this time a little more assertively. The student doctor looked as white as a sheet but also looked like he was doing what he HAD to do because of what his boss was telling him. He looked young enough to be wet behind the ears.

I'm standing in a corner, in a room the size of a box with these 2 men trying to take my child and vaccinate him against my will. I hold onto Adam as the student doctor is trying to take him from my arms and Adam begins to cry and cling to me. I'm shaking; I'm afraid and Adam can sense this. I put both arms around Adam and bring his head towards my bosom to protect him and I pull bravery from somewhere.

"He will NOT be vaccinated. You will NOT be putting poison in my son." I stammered, shaking like a leaf but I held strong.

The pediatrician GLARED at me. "Well," he says clearly irritated." If you

It is OKAY to not be sure about something; to be cautious in making the right choice for your child. This doesn't make you a bad, or unfit parent. It is OKAY to research on your own, to be knowledgeable, and to tell doctors "NO." They are human just like us. They make mistakes; they call it practice for a reason. Beyond that it is your LEGAL right to not vaccinate your child. It is your freedom as an American citizen.
