REVENUE: May Have Revenue Impact, But No Statement Yet Issued

BACKGROUND:

Within 24 hours of the Department of Human Services (DHS) determining that a child's death was a result of child abuse or neglect, Oregon law requires that DHS assign a Critical Incident Response Team (CIRT) to investigate in certain cases. A CIRT's primary goal is to review the case and develop recommendations to improve the child welfare system to prevent future incidences. A CIRT is assigned a case review if the fatality occurred when the child was in DHS custody at the time of incident, or when the child was subject to a recent child protective services assessment.

SB 819 -1 STAFF MEASURE SUMMARY

Senate Bill 819 expands the parameters and responsibilities of Critical Incident Response Teams and requires they be assigned when a deceased child, the child's sibling, or any child in the same household was: subject to a child protective services assessment; subject to a recent child welfare or adoption case; or subject to any report of abuse. The measure sets forth the membership of CIRTs, and requires that DHS provide the CIRT with all available information on the case. Confidential information provided by DHS is required to be properly maintained, and the measure sets forth requirements for the maintenance of a CIRT's case review records. Senate Bill 819 also establishes timelines and requirements for a CIRT to file initial, progress, and final reports with DHS. If a CIRT concludes that DHS personnel matters were involved in the child fatality, the team is required to refer the matter to relevant DHS personnel divisions.
