

I support HB 2927, a bill to use a constitutional power explicitly delegated to the states, for the purpose of having every voters vote count the same and to ensure that the person with the most votes wins, like every other election in this country - and in every other functioning democracy. Is it really so radical to ask that the person with the most votes win? I believe in the principle of one person, one vote, which means all votes count the same. Please support HB 2927 and have Oregon join other states in bringing one-person, one-vote to our presidential elections.
