BACKGROUND:

In 1998, Oregon voters approved Ballot Measure 67 which allowed medical use of marijuana in Oregon within specified limits. It also established a state-controlled permit system. In December 1998, the Oregon Legislative Assembly passed Measure 67 into law. The law, known as the Oregon Medical Marijuana Act (OMMA), provides legal protections for qualified patients; requires a physician-written statement of the patient's qualifying debilitating medical condition; allows for a caregiver to provide assistance; and mandates an Oregon Health Authority registration system.

In 2014, Oregon voters approved Ballot Measure 91 (Measure 91) to allow the recreational sale and use of marijuana. The measure established the recreational system would be licensed and regulated by the Oregon Liquor Control Commission (OLCC), with tax revenues from the sale of recreational marijuana funding specified services. Marijuana produced within the recreational system must be tracked from seed to sale, and only OLCC licensees may transfer or accept marijuana produced from another OLCC licensee.

House Bill 2198 would combine the two systems into one under the OLCC. The measure creates a series of provisions for licensing and regulating OMMP producers, processors, and dispensaries. House Bill 2198 would also create a system for marijuana producers who produce only for registered OMMP patients within the State Department of Agriculture.
