BACKGROUND:

Current Oregon county planning, zoning and housing laws allow the construction of an accessory dwelling unit (ADU) on land zoned for either exclusive farm use (EFU) or rural residential (RR) use only if the ADU would be used for farmworkers. Further, to qualify for a replacement dwelling under current law, the existing dwelling must have the following features: intact exterior walls and roof; indoor plumbing including a kitchen sink, toilet, and bathing facilities; interior wiring for lights; a heating system; and the dwelling to be replaced must be removed, demolished, or converted within three months of completion of the replacement dwelling. A person may also request a deferred replacement permit to allow for the construction of the replacement dwelling at any time, provided that the existing structure is removed or demolished within three months after the permit is issued, otherwise the permit is void.

House Bill 3012A authorizes counties to allow the owner of a property within an area zoned for rural residential use to construct a new single-family dwelling on the lot or parcel, subject to certain conditions, without destroying a historic home on the same lot or parcel, and instead converting it to an ADU. The measure prohibits the subdivision of the lot or parcel, limits modifications on the ADU, prohibits rebuilding of the structure in the case of fire and does not allow the construction of an additional ADU on the same lot or parcel. House Bill 3012A authorizes counties to require that the new dwelling be served by the same water supply source as the ADU and allows counties to impose additional conditions for approval.
