Rules Committee,

regarding this action, it is my sincere belief that Americans are disillusioned and doubtful that their votes matter anymore. The validity of our electoral process has never been so frail and fragile. People do not vote because they do not believe that their vote matters anymore, they doubt if it will even be counted. Our institutions work because Americans believe in the system, they have trust and faith in our Democracy..or they used to have that, is what I should say. More than ever elections are rigged against us, and the common man has not a clue what the electoral college hopes to accomplish. What is a super delegate and why should I even care? Our elections are on the verge of becoming a sham, and our citizens are on the verge of giving up any hope for legitimate leadership. Empowering each citizen's vote would be but one step in the right direction for our reform, to help us keep the faith in the Democracy our forefathers fought so valiantly to protect.
