

Rules Committee,

The Electoral College is not just dangerously outdated, it is dangerous. Please pass HB2927 this year with no amendments and no ballot referral.

The apportionment of electoral votes to states no longer represents the population of the country, and renders meaningless the votes of any minority party in a heavily-leaning state. In addition, the all-or-none application in most states obliterates any margin of victory that, across the nation, may have a dramatic effect on the final outcome.

The make-up and execution of the Electoral College and its votes create too much opportunity to skew, even override, the results of the national vote count.
