

Rules Committee,

It's really quite simple... if we were monitoring other countries voting, we would think it absurd and wrong that after the popular vote would be cast, that another body would be able to override that popular vote. We don't do it in meetings, or on the floor of the senate. It was ok in the days before computers, but it is the 21st century and people want their voices heard. Plus, candidates would have to visit Oregon. Electing the president by popular vote is the right thing to do.
