

Rules Committee,

As a woman and as a voter, I believe that our president should be elected by the popular vote. The electoral college is an antiquated system that has led to president-elects who do not act in the interests of the general population, as well as a house and senate that does not hold itself accountable to voters. The current administration is a complete failure, comparable to a garbage fire, and had the electoral college already been abolished, we would have elected a different president who actually represents the majority of Americans. Oh, and while we're at it, fuck you Paul Ryan.
