Dear Rep. Rayfield,

As you are aware Colorado passed the Sunshine law in 1996 which provided more specific reporting requirements for lobbyists in Colorado. This reporting provided a more open and transparent way for citizens to be able to determine an organization position on a particular piece of legislation.

As required by this law a lobbying firm and the firm's individual lobbyists report the firm's income and individual incomes related directly to lobbying. During the legislative session lobbyists are required to report all official positions a client has taken on legislation. The system works well and is a great resource to the citizens and the lobbying community.

Best,

Megan Wagner
