ISSUES DISCUSSED:

- Percentage of veterans in Oregon's total population
- Percentage of Oregon veterans with PTSD
- Whether need for task force or work group exists
- Absence of input from health care community

EFFECT OF AMENDMENT:

[-1 amendment] Replaces emergency clause with effective date 91st day after sine die.

BACKGROUND:

Post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) can result from exposure to trauma - either experienced or witnessed - including exposure to combat or other dangers while serving in the military. More than 50 percent of the general population will experience trauma in their lives, and an average of about 7 to 8 percent will have PTSD at some point. Those who serve in the military may be exposed to combat and other dangers that could lead to PTSD.

There are more than 325,000 veterans living in Oregon, and 10-30 percent are estimated to have PTSD. More may express only partial symptoms. The percentage varies depending generally on where the veteran served, and specifically based on the veteran's individual experience: between 11-20% of those who served in Operations Iraqi Freedom and Enduring Freedom have PTSD in any given year; about 12% of those who served in the Gulf War (Desert Storm) in any given year; and about 30% of Vietnam Veterans have had PTSD at some point in their lives.

Senate Bill 129 establishes a task force to identify funding sources, and study and recommend improvements in PTSD diagnosis and treatment, for veterans in particular, by September 15, 2018.
