BACKGROUND:

In 2015, the Legislative Assembly consolidated two separate provisions of law authorizing Class C felonies to be "set aside" or expunged. See section 32a (5)(b) and (d), chapter 820, Oregon Laws 2015. The consolidated text now provides that a conviction may be expunged if it is for any "crime punishable as a misdemeanor, including judgment of conviction for a misdemeanor pursuant to ORS 161.705." ORS 161.705, in turn, authorizes a court to reduce a Class C felony to a Class A misdemeanor. A Class C felony is thus punishable as a Class A misdemeanor within the meaning of the expungement statute. Senate Bill 507 clarifies that, in the ordinary case, a Class C felony may be expunged.
