BACKGROUND:

Law enforcement officials have struggled to identify provisions of the law that are violated when a person affixes a GPS tracking device to the vehicle of another person. The law does, however, limit the authority of these officers to utilize GPS tracking devices for investigatory purposes. ORS 133.619 describes the manner in which a police officer may execute a warrant authorizing the installation or tracking of a mobile tracking device. SB 483 criminalizes knowingly affixing a GPS tracking device to a motor vehicle without the owner's consent, while preserving use of these devices by commercial motor carriers and law enforcement under a warrant or court order.
