We in Oregon are not the same as those inside the Washington beltway. We believe in fairness for all. All income is just that: income. Why should it be taxed at different percentages, depending on the 'status' of the taxpayer as a 'business owner' or just plan employee? (Of course, the amount of income being taxed should matter; Warren Buffet is correct that there's no reason his income bracket should be lower than that of his secretary....)

Please keep the playing field level.

Respectfully, Oregonian John Kloetzel.
