

Rebecca Roth

When my 6th grade son's new principal forced the science class at Pringle Elementary to join with the creative writing class, I knew there was something wrong in Oregon. A whole generation has been fed the idea that science is whatever you can dream up, -- reality is whatever you can fool the people into believing it is.

The kids were supposed to learn about what environment is, but then instead of actually studying real environments, they were supposed to create one, and create the animal that would live in that environment. The teacher later told me this whole exercise was a complete waste of time and only my son learned something because I had insisted that he do a report on a real animal and how it interacts with its real environment.

In an Oregon state school system, the children did not learn what science is, but only how to dream something from their imaginations. Thinking they are educated, they have become fools. And that is what is on display here today.

You want us to believe that you are "saving the planet," (a very high moral goal indeed,) -- from human created carbon pollution. Any analysis to the contrary will be met with a smirk, a wink and a nod, because you do not want to listen to anybody unless they speak from the imaginary world you have dreamed up to increase the amount of power you have over Oregon—a fake goal to fake us out.

This kind of thing happened in Russia a century ago, (I can bring you the story later if you want) and of course the communist govt did not take any responsibility for doing what they did during the disaster that followed. Instead they blamed the scientist they had anointed, and he suffered at the hands of the government. Communists never take responsibility for what they create, because they have the power of the state to force people whether they live or die, and part of communism is the belief that it actually is best for the world if people die.

This "computer modeling of climate" is no more real than all the weather reports for next month that you can locate. You will impoverish us all with your dreams—well, maybe not all...there are some people still getting insanely rich with the people's money from the Obamacare disaster you foisted on us several years ago, and various "green" projects that are sucking productivity down the drain. But what I have learned is that the Democrat Party does not care. Every Democrat city and state is in upheaval and your people on the street are rioting for you, while your media covers for you. As long as you can get the people to vote for you, you will do as you please.

The rules of scientific discovery, created by scientists with a Christian world view, who had observed that God created order, and who believed that an orderly method of discovery of God's creation would bring us out of superstition, are supposed to protect the discovery process from fraud like we see here today. They would not approve of the slippery way this is being conducted. It is for political gain, not scientific discovery, that we are gathered.

For example, you called it "global warming"--but it was demonstrated that the world is actually cooling, and has been for quite some time, you began to mock us. And you say, "Oh no, what we have are "climate change deniers." You have widened your definition to the point of absurdity, and you are going to do what you want out of the things you have dreamed up. Today we are told to believe that carbon, the life food of plants, is a pollutant. Just because you say so. And taxing industry to death will "save the planet" you tell us.

And after it is no longer able to be denied that this is a disaster, then you will blame the Republicans. I have been around for long enough to know that you always blame the Republicans. So, on with the show...let's see what you can destroy us with next. Oh, you are calling it CAP AND TRADE?—How cute!!! Maybe you can find my son's principal to give you an "A."