

HB 4135

Vote No R. Roth

We have seen how abortion - the killing of babies - has been advocated for, and taught to our children in school, without advocating for the right to life of the baby, totally shaping the argument on the right of the woman to kill her child w/o restriction and even having women discover after the abortion that it WAS a baby.

How much easier will it be for elder-killing industry to grow up and convince people that it is a "right" to kill their parents. It takes time, effort and money to care for one's parents, and the "right" to be free of that will have no legal consequences. Then also, the state will make conditions even more difficult so that more will choose to kill their parents. In this, we are moving in the exact path of NAZI Germany, that first emptied its institutions of care for various handicapped, before beginning to round up Jewish people.

The thing most of us fear is to starve to death, and to intentionally do that to a parent is shameful and unconscionable. This is a terrible expansion of the love of death by this state that prides ourself already on providing death to the most vulnerable and youthful among us. We should carry black shame for choosing to even give this bill a hearing.
