

OREGON PATIENTS CALL FOR YES ON HB 4005

I am a former ER nurse and educator living on a fixed income. I have a chronic heart condition, severe osteoarthritis and crippling allergies. I have to take about 23 different medications every day. Having previous experience in the healthcare industry, seeing the price gouging by pharmaceutical companies is infuriating.

There are occasions where I have to prioritize medications and stop taking others, often times worsening my health. I have skipped refilling a prescription for one of my inhalers because at $125, I cannot afford it.

When I recently sent a list of my prescriptions to a friend in Canada just to compare costs, I was shocked by the difference in price. She reported that 17 of my prescribed drugs, for which I pay $236 out of pocket here, cost only $19 combined in Canada. A prescribed topical anti-inflammatory that would cost me $178 after insurance here is sold for just $10 over the counter there. My $125 inhaler is only $4 in Canada. It's just not right. Fifteen of them were manufactured here in the United States, but I pay more than Canadians.

My story is one that is too familiar for many and it's unacceptable. You shouldn't have to miss taking your medications because they are unaffordable. It's time for pharmaceutical companies to be held accountable.

I pay 31 times more than I would in Canada for my inhaler. I pay 12 times more for all my medications combined. I think drug companies should have to report when they want to raise drug prices by a certain amount and I want to know why my medications cost more than they do in other countries. That's why I support HB 4005.

HB 4005: PRESCRIPTION DRUG PRICE TRANSPARENCY ACT

Because the problem is the price

Prescription drugs have saved lives and improved the quality of life for millions of Oregonians. But too many people can't afford their medications and are forced to take reduced dosages, cut pills in half, or make hard choices between medicine or rent or food. It's time to find out why.

That's why patients, nurses, pharmacists, doctors, hospitals, health care advocates, health plans, and others have come together to support HB 4005. This important bill brings real transparency to the prices Oregonians pay for prescriptions medications.
