

I'd like to suggest to the special committee on COVID that the state offer tests to grocery store workers. The stores need to remain open, and it seems logical to ensure both that the workers remain healthy – and also to make sure any sick workers aren't spreading to customers.

Of course health workers should be priority, but including grocery store workers could be a benefit to the greater cause.

Thanks!

Susan Laarman
susanlaarman@gmail.com