

Good afternoon,

My wife and I are landlords of a rental property we own. The rental income we receive from our tenant is needed for maintenance, insurance, HOA dues and property taxes. I am currently unemployed so this income stream is important for other expenses besides owning the property, so any relief package needs to consider both tenants and landlords. Any hardship claim from a tenant needs to be documented from their employer, verifying a change in employment status and if so, if the tenant is applying for unemployment benefits or any other job placement activities. Please consider all aspects of the rental industry as you discuss the current situation.

Respectfully submitted,
Dave Norbury
