

I am a landlord in Oregon and initiated eviction at the end of February. Now, not only can I not get my tenant out for non-payment of rent, I have to allow her to live there for free for the next three months even though her job is not affected? Where is the fairness to owners? The court system in Oregon is so lenient to tenants that it takes 30 days for an eviction. There needs to be a better definition to the order and owners must get compensated. We have bills, mortgages that rely on rent payments to make it.
