

Distinguished legislators,

Dr. Phil Fisher at the University of Oregon is publishing a weekly blog summarizing key findings from his national survey of parents of young children about the impacts of COVID-19. The whole series is great, and this week's blog focuses on child care impacts. I found it very relevant to the discussions of the child care taskforce:

At the end of the article, he shares policy recommendations to address the challenges and come out of the pandemic stronger. Here is a link to the whole series, which also looks at issues related to disability, health, and more: <https://medium.com/rapid-ec-project>.

Best,
Dana
