

I'm wondering if the state can be made to pay any fees and interest and penalties accrued in such case especially if child support takes any action against me like a license suspension or jail for being behind, I've been current on my child support until now and I pay $126/ month I'm currently $252 behind. What about my credit score that will take years to fix, also I have a court hearing coming up that i have an attorney for but he's not going to represent me because I haven't paid him yet and this could cause even more problems for me. I have appealed the decision my hearing is set for 9-9 so things are moving forward but the damage is already done. Myself and thousands of other Oregonians appreciate what your doing here.

Allen Simoneaux