

Police are just the first level of injustice.

Today most people think "Police" when talking about bias and injustice. But injustice is built into the whole court institution. The only systematic aspect the courts in America have in common is "money buys justice". These bills are a step in the correct direction, but they are just band-aids in the real problem, Justice cost money!

I am a system engineer studying systemic inequality in money and justice. Just addressing the police without addressing the courts is like talking about sex without talking about pregnancy. The police and sex art the first interaction, but it is the courts and pregnancy that define what happens after the first interaction.

If the courts do not allow for zero cost justice, then there is no justice. It is legal cost that made the system fail. Racial bias comes in two forms, direct bias of race and economic bias due to blacks are poorer than whites because of racial bias.

Police is just the first level of injustice and bias. Police AND court reform is required.
