

For years I have supported the Clean Energy Jobs Bill in its various incarnations. The bill now before you has been well-tempered by bipartisan negotiation and represents our only realistic chance to actually reach climate care goals set by previous legislatures. Due to climate change and the wildfires its spawns, I can no longer spend my summers in Oregon. Last summer only a sudden change of wind saved our family farm (home to three generations) from wildfire. But that is not why I consider the Clean Energy Jobs Bill to be such a crucial opportunity for Oregonians. We can no longer postpone taking responsibility to salvage for future generations a habitable remnant of the world we have known and and still love. Sincerely, D.
