

Organizations in Support of HB 2631

Mission statement/self-description

EMO is a statewide association of Christian, ecumenical & interfaith partners working together to improve the lives of Oregonians.

At First Unitarian Portland, we strive, together, to nurture the individual spirit and to build the beloved community.

The Insight Alliance works in prisons and in the community with a simple focus: Understanding the limitless nature of the human mind and recognizing our own innate wellbeing: that everything we need to thrive already exists within us.

Mercy Corps Northwest is committed to assisting low-income citizens of Oregon and Washington to create more productive, secure and satisfying lives for themselves, their families and their communities. We support them in increasing their economic self-sufficiency and community integration by providing resources and support in their efforts to improve their lives.

OASIS is building a movement that empowers communities to prevent child sexual abuse and help survivors live full, healthy, joyful lives. We honor the lives and amplify the voices of people who were sexually abused as children.

The mission of the OCAPIA is to work for the implementation and establishment of economic, social, legal, and political equality for Asian American & Pacific Islanders in Oregon and to maintain a continuing assessment of the issues and needs confronting Asian Pacific Americans.

The mission of the Oregon Commission for Women is to work for the implementation and establishment of economic, social, legal, and political equality for women and to maintain a continuing assessment of the issues and needs confronting women in Oregon.

School of Medicine
Avel Gordly Center for Healing

OHSU’s focus on healing, teaching and discovery — combined with our deep history in Oregon — is unique. We are the state’s only academic health center and one of the only universities in the U.S. devoted exclusively to educating doctors, dentists, nurses, pharmacists and public health professionals. We not only treat the most complex health needs in the region, we make discoveries that save lives and train leaders to address the societal issues that impede health.

In February 2008, OHSU's Behavioral Health Clinic was renamed the Avel Gordly Center for Healing to meet the mental health needs of the African American community, as well as the diverse populations of Oregon.

The Pathfinder Network provides justice system-impacted individuals and families the tools and support they need to be safe and thrive in their communities. We provide programs and services for incarcerated individuals through the Oregon Department of Corrections and for parents, children, and families in the community.

We serve marginalized individuals and families who live in the Portland/Vancouver metro area. We work with diverse leaders, faith communities, and Oregonians working toward the common good.

Criminal Justice Policy Research Institute is a multi-disciplinary research unit serving the entire PSU community, but affiliated with the Criminology and Criminal Justice Division of the School of Government.

Red Lodge Transition Services is a Native American led organization that provides culturally focused programs for women releasing from jail, prison or treatment.

Salt & Straw is about more than just ice cream... We make taste-provoking ice cream, by hand in small batches, in our Los Angeles and Portland kitchens.

Sponsors transforms lives and strengthens the community by providing life-changing opportunities for people with criminal histories. Sponsors offers a broad range of services—housing, employment, counseling, and mentoring—that people need to be successful.

The YWCA of Greater Portland is the local affiliate of one of the oldest and largest women’s organizations in the nation. We have been an active part of the Portland community for the past 110 years, providing services to women, children, and families, from all walks of life—regardless of their age, race, or income level.
