

I received a no cause eviction notice giving me until February 28th to vacate. Scrambling g to find new housing with no real savings has been a nightmare. I also found out that there is a cause, we had a burglary and the property mgr. Let it slip that we were given this no cause because he suspected me of breaking the window the burglars broke. Insult upon injury and totally inappropriate assumption. I am a senior on disability and retirement, have been a perfect renter, how dare he accuse me of basically lying to the police and my insurance company!?! Instead of talking to me ge made an assumption that he could not prove and there us a cause. He is going to rent my duplex as soon as I move out. This breaks the no cause rules. I never thought I would be put out of my home for no reason in the middle of winter after 6 years renting from him. Isnt this illegal? Everyone is in danger of homelessness in an assumption. I hope no one else ever has this happen to them. It's a nightmare for no legal reason. Thank you.
