Good Morning,

I am writing this letter of opposition as a citizen who believes in human rights and medical freedom.

I have strong concerns about vaccine mandates, knowing that there is a chance of injury. With that chance, there must be a choice.

I also believe that the individual ingredients in vaccines should be tested in double blind, placebo controlled trials for a considerable amount of time. These trials should be conducted by researchers not affiliated or paid by the companies that make the vaccines.

After these trials, people should be informed about the ingredients and potential side effects from their doctors. Their medical history must be considered, as these vaccines do not affect everyone the same way. The informed individual should be making the final decision. If they aren't, who takes responsibility if they are injured?

With chance of injury, there must be a choice.

I appreciate the opportunity to be heard and your willingness to read my thoughts and concerns about this bill.

Sincerely,
Katie Anzalone
