BACKGROUND:

Child care facilities include day nurseries, nursery schools, child care centers, certified or registered family child care homes, or similar entities that care for children operating under any name. Child care providers must be licensed, registered, or certified with the Office of Child Care (OCC) within the Early Learning Division (ELD) of the Department of Education. The OCC licenses roughly 1,000 certified child care centers, 350 certified family child care homes, and 4,000 registered family child care homes, and collects and publishes information on preschool and school-age recorded programs.

All child care staff and any individual who may have unsupervised access to children (e.g., adults living in the home, volunteers, maintenance staff, office staff, and regular visitors) are subject to a background check and required to enroll in the Central Background Registry maintained by the OCC. The OCC also conducts on-site assessments of all complaints. The public can also search facilities online to find complaint information about active and pending licensees, as well as those found to be providing unlicensed or unlawful child care.

The OCC is authorized to conduct on-site investigations of child care facilities if illegal child care is alleged and is required to conduct such investigations if there is a serious complaint. Senate Bill 813 requires the OCC to make reasonable attempts to identify any facility about which it receives a complaint if the complaint includes enough detail to determine who the child is, or a provider, or owner, operator or employee, or specific information about the facility itself. The measure also allows the Early Learning Council to adopt a definition of 'serious complaint' by rule and requires the definition to include notifications or reports of alleged child abuse received by the OCC. Senate Bill 813 also allows the Early Learning Council to adopt a definition of 'regulated subsidy facility' by rule.
