BACKGROUND:

In Oregon, trusts can take several different forms, from a revocable living trust used as a mechanism to avoid probate proceedings, to special needs trusts established to cover certain expenses of a person while maintaining eligibility for benefits. One type of trust currently allowed in Oregon is a noncharitable purpose trust. Such trusts may be created without a definite beneficiary, and may not continue to exist for more than 90 years.

House Bill 2598 establishes noncharitable business purpose trusts and provides additional details on the ownership interest that can be an asset of the trust, the objectives allowed for such a trust, and allows enforcement for more than 90 years, if specifically noted in the terms of the trust.
