

The bill (Senate Bill 978) is just one more attempt to control honest law abiding citizens. It does absolutely nothing to prevent crime nor does it do anything to attempt to apprehend criminals.

If you raise the age limit for people to purchase firearms, are you going to raise the age limit for people to join the military? I seriously doubt it.

How are you planning to enforce laws that attempt to control how people store firearms unless you go door to door and inspect every single home in the state? You aren't going to do that either.

If you want to pass a law that could actually do some good, how about passing a bill that would provide enough money to law enforcement agencies that would give them enough money to hire more enforcement agents to enforce the laws we already have? No, you aren't going to do that either.

These feel good laws don't do anyone any good and make current lawmakers look like fools.
