BACKGROUND:

Nationally 1 in 5 women, 1 in 14 men, and 1 in 4 trans students experience sexual assault while in college. Sexual harassment is experienced at even higher rates - 62% of women, 43% of men, and 75% of trans students report being sexually harassed in college.

In the 2015 legislative session, Oregon passed HB 3476 making Oregon the first state in the country to provide students with privileged, trained advocates on campuses. In 2017, Oregon passed SB 759 which required universities to provide student victims with written notification about their rights and options to empower survivors to make the choices best for them.

The U.S. Department of Education recently published a notice of proposed rulemaking that would require universities to change some of their current policies and practices when responding to allegations of sexual harassment and assault. See 34 C.F.R. 106 (2018). Specifically, the proposed rules would narrow the definition of harassment, limit jurisdiction and omit constructive notice as a trigger for investigation.

House Bill 4315 requires institutions of higher education to adopt written policies on sexual harassment, sexual assault, domestic violence, dating violence and stalking. It also ensures that necessary staff receive annual training on relevant topics and in an evidence-informed manner.
